

Ms. Kobika Thillainathan is a lecturer and researcher at the faculty of Allied Health Sciences, University of Jaffna. Kobika received the B.Sc.(Hons) in Medical Laboratory Sciences, from the University of Sri Jayewardenepura, Sri Lanka (2015), and M.Sc. degree in Molecular Pathology (reading) at the University of Colombo, Sri Lanka. She possesses the experience of working as a scientific officer who worked majorly on DNA typing with a scientific approach. Her research interests include genetics behind complicated human diseases especially, the studies related to cardiovascular genetics. She teaches courses in undergraduate degree and has a hand in supporting undergraduates in research and publication since 2018. She is highly interested in interdisciplinary research and having co-authored a book on 'Palmyrah Research in Sri Lanka: A Way Forward' which was published in 2019. She has been an active member of Research and Publication Committee of the Faculty of Allied Health Sciences, University of Jaffna and currently is involved in creating the first molecular research laboratory within the faculty to serve as an initiative in the Northern region.